

ANNOUNCING

[NEW] 2004 Minority Women's Health Summit

WHO: Professionals, including policy makers, public health officials, health care workers, academics, medical researchers, and representatives from faith- and community-based organizations.

WHAT: The conference will explore a range of topics related to the health of women of color. These include: prevention strategies in both urban and rural communities; strategies to increase positive health outcomes; how to diversify leadership in health sciences, education, research and policy; and how to ensure that health issues of women of color are addressed. Key focus areas will include: HIV/AIDS, cardiovascular disease, cancer and diabetes.

WHEN: August 12-15, Washington, DC

CONTACT: To register and to find out more about the conference, head to <http://www.4woman.gov/mwhs/>.